What is Stevia?

The plant Stevia rebaudiana has been used for more than 1,500 years by the Guarani peoples of South America. The leaves have been used traditionally for hundreds of years in both Brazil and Paraguay to sweeten local teas and medicines, and as a "sweet treat"

Steviol glycosides components are derived from the leaves of the plant Stevia rebaudiana, which are 200 to 300 times the sweetness of sugar. The steviol glycosides are not metabolized in the human body, so it contains zero calories.
